

Your teams from seats 1 through 12

Each draft is a 12-team snake, 13 rounds, Yahoo roster slots. Your seat always takes the highest 9-category value still on the board. The other managers change how they pick. The roster shown for a seat is the one whose total value sits closest to the middle of that seat's drafts. Value is the sum of category z-scores. Predicted games are listed beside each name and do not change the rank.

Best available

Every other manager takes the highest value. One draft per seat. This is the roster the live suggestion would build if nobody reaches.

Games lean

When several players sit within 0.75 value of the best, the other managers lean toward the one predicted for more games. Twenty drafts per seat. Your own pick stays on value, so the difference is who is left when you are on the clock.

Position reach

A manager with an open center slot takes the best center in the top 18 about 40 percent of the time, when that center is within 2.0 value of the best player. An open point-guard slot does the same about 30 percent of the time. Twenty drafts per seat.

Read a seat this way: the summary row is the average roster value, the average sum of predicted games, and how often the same player was your first pick. The table under it is the middle roster, filed into Yahoo slots.
